Most Happening

By: Tanya Gagne

The twin cities, Auburn and Lewiston, share similar attributes that can be seen just about everywhere.

Places to gather and meet, busy stores in which to shop,
are just a few places off the list's very top.

Places to eat and be seen are also scattered about,
citizens needn't drive far simply take the shortest route.

Lewiston though has possession of the Colisee,
a huge civic center where the MAINEiacs play!

Citizens of all ages come carpooling in,
bringing cameras to capture the home team's big win.

Teenage girls arrive in style in order to socialize, while the boys of their age wear team jerseys with levis .

Slap shots echo with a loud "SMACK!"
while the other team hustles to get the puck back.

Cheers thunder as the other goalie slips up in his game,
the home team has just scored and feels no shame.

Boos can be heard from across the smooth ice,
but no one yells back the current score will suffice.

The visiting fans sweat while the MAINEiacs continue to score, to faithful fans the opposing team is in fact quite a terrible bore.

Unrefined players sometimes throw punches in an attempt to rattle our team, helmets are tossed aside and in anticipation fighting faces gleam.

The last laugh is of course ours when the MAINEiacs win, our team is the best that ever has been.

This arena which was built in 1958 has served citizens for years, it was even where young Cassius Clay fought amid local cheers.

The Festival De Joie once called the Colisee its home many years past, allowing Franco-Americans to proudly showcase their heritage amassed.

The Boston Celtics, way back when, have even come to play inside, bouncing balls on the largest portable floor known of worldwide.

Country stars from down south have also performed on its rather large stage, Trace Adkins, Dierks Bentley and Miranda Lambert all have made the front-page.

People gathered in 2007 in order to watch monster trucks, race to and fro squashing smaller cars as simply as pollacks.

Little children assuredly have not been forgot, Care Bears came to town last spring and were enjoyed by the besot.

Although the facade has changed from over the decades, all the improvements have met with great acclimates.

Twin city seniors will even be seen earning diplomas real soon when they don their caps and gowns the first weekend in June.

The Colisee has been and still is the most "happening place", people continue to come each day filling all its available space.
